

I am writing to strongly protest any potential repeal of, or limitation upon, New Jersey's "do not call" regulations. Those regulations are responsible from freeing our household from countless unwanted telephone calls. To eat dinner in peace, we no longer have to keep our telephone ringer off. Post 9/11, we do not feel comfortable ignoring a ringing phone, but that was exactly what we had to do because we were so inundated with calls. No one, especially a telemarketer, has a "right" to intrude on my time or demand my attention -- keep these rules in place!
